

Crossings: A Doctor's Story of Life, Death, and Hope at an American Military Hospital in Iraq

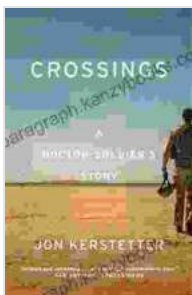

By Dr. Jon Kerstetter

As a young doctor, Jon Kerstetter was eager to serve his country. He joined the U.S. Army and was deployed to Iraq in 2003. For the next year, he worked as a doctor at a combat support hospital, where he treated soldiers who had been wounded in battle.

In Crossings, Kerstetter shares his experiences from Iraq. He writes about the challenges of working in a combat zone, the horrors of war, and the strength and resilience of the soldiers he treated. He also writes about the personal toll that the war took on him and his family.
